Mother was tired. Scott could tell by the way she sighed and pushed back her hair from her forehead.

There was a knock at the door and Scott ran to answer it. It was his friends, Jason and Mark.

"Hey Scott! How would you like to go to the skatepark with us?" Mark asked. "Sure, if Mom says it's okay," Scott answered. Just as he went inside, the telephone rang. His mother answered and He heard her say:

"I would love to go with you to the missionary meeting, Mrs Norris, but I can't. The house is a mess and I just got the baby to sleep. She will sleep for a couple of hours, so I need to stay home."

"If I could baby-sit for Mom," Scott thought, "perhaps she would go to the meeting! I could clean up the house while the baby slept." But that would mean that he could not go to the skatepark with his friends.

Scott has an important decision to make. What do you think are the consequences of each decision?

Choice 1: Forget about Mom and go with his friends to the skatepark:
